DID YOU KNOW? | BOOTLEGS

In many ways, a successful franchise can be a victim of its own success. In the case of Star Wars especially, bootlegged merchandise was available sometimes even before licensed merchandise. Lucasfilm famously cracked down on bootleggers in order to maintain control of character likenesses, product quality, and also to protect licensees who were paying Lucasfilm. In the case of toys, most bootlegs were of non-U.S. origin and thus harder for Lucasfilm to control. Often these were produced in countries where there was no official product or the official product was out of financial reach for many people. Typically, these toys are made of sub-standard materials and often feature exotic looks or are a mash-up of various parts; but therein lies the charm.

Bootlegs maintain a firm place in toy collecting because of their unique looks and low production runs. While many action figures were often directly copied from Kenner figures, in some cases the designs were unique to the particular bootleg line. Knock-offs fall under this general category in collecting, but in those cases the items are in the style of licensed toys, not copies.

DID YOU KNOW? | INTERNATIONAL LICENSED PRODUCTS

From the very beginning, Star Wars was a worldwide phenomenon that required an army of licensees to fulfill the overwhelming public demand for new product. The toys themselves are prime examples of how multiple international companies worked in unison (though sometimes alone) to release existing toys in their local markets or to create new toys specific to said markets. Working under parent company General Mills, Kenner as the primary toy licensee also developed toys with Kenner Canada, with Palitoy in the UK, and with Parker in Germany. Beyond the General Mills connection, there was Lili Ledy (Mexico); Irwin (Canada); Takara, Tsukuda, and Popy (Japan); Clipper (Netherlands); Denys Fisher (UK); Meccano (France), PBP/Poch (Spain); Basa (Peru); Harbert (Italy); Toltoys (Australia); and TopToys (Argentina), to name the action figure heavies. The last licensed original Star Wars toys were sold by Glasslite (Brazil) in 1988 and 1989, long after the toys disappeared from most places.

DID YOU KNOW? | POPY ACTION FIGURES

Popy was a subsidiary of the Bandai toy company and in 1980 they released a series of 15 numbered Star Wars action figures under the World Hero moniker. Although the figures were released in conjunction with The Empire Strikes Back, and labeled as such, only four were actually from the new film. In order to cut costs and help differentiate the figures from other toys of the time they were distributed in small, full-color boxes. Each untaped box contained a figure in clear baggie and two small catalogues. The bagged figures themselves are otherwise identical to U.S. figures so it is the box and catalogs that make these pieces unique. This series was specific to the Japanese market and was sold in countertop bin displays which further optimized store space. Due to the cheaper packaging and space requirements, these figures had a lower retail price than the Takara carded figures made them appealing to consumers.

DID YOU KNOW? | “TOY TONI” FIGURES

In late 2013 the collecting community became aware that a dealer known as “Toy Toni” had allegedly purchased thousands of authentic factory stock cardbacks and bubbles in the late 1980’s when the Palitoy factory closed its doors for business. The common consensus in the collecting field is that these Palitoy and General Mills cardbacks and bubbles, which were genuine components but never assembled at the factory, were later combined with authentic loose action figures to create “carded” figures. These assembled-after-the-fact carded figures circulated for a number of years and a small population of these graded figures now exists on the market.

Collectors have gone to great lengths to identify certain bubble, card, and even figure combinations as “Toy Toni” creations since they do not match known factory originals. As these pieces are assembled from genuine components, many collectors are accepting of the pieces when accurately described as “Toy Toni” examples.

DID YOU KNOW? | PALIToy

The name Palitoy was trademarked in 1935 by British Xylonite as a name for their toy division, but the earliest beginnings date to 1919 and Cascelloid Limited formed by Alfred Edward Pallett in Leicestershire. Palitoy was acquired by General Mills in 1968 simultaneous to their acquisition of Kenner Toys in the U.S. The company manufactured some of the most popular toys in Britain including Action Man, Action Force, Tiny Tears, Pippa & Star Wars which it held under license from Kenner. In order to adapt to a different marketplace it was necessary for Palitoy to cost-reduce some of the Star Wars toys that Kenner developed and their most famous redesign included a colourful cardboard, self-assembly version of the Death Star which has since become a highly coveted collectible in its own right. Palitoy was ultimately purchased by Hasbro in 1991 along with Tonka (Kenner) and a few years later the Palitoy operations in Coalville ceased, closing the door on decades of British toy history

DID YOU KNOW? | CARDED FIGURES

The blister pack or carded action figure was developed to economically display an action figure where the customer could see the toy as well as be drawn to it by colorful packaging. Kenner also realized the benefit of “collect them all” as a powerful sales tool so they always showed the entire line on the back of the cards. Collectors developed a quick nomenclature to identify and differentiate the various iterations of packaging which largely bases it on the number of action figures shown. Beginning with the 12-back, the successive waves ushered in more and more figures; 20, 21, 31,... all the way up to 92 at the end of the line. The variety is large as films and characters were added, accessories and sets came and went, and mail-in offers enticed children to purchase even more action figures. A complete cardback guide is shown at the back of this auction catalog on page 245 to help bidders understand the differences and show the whole breadth of the action figure line.

A SW12A is a Star Wars cardback showing twelve different action figures; the A denotes it is the first variant of cardback with twelve characters. An ESB21G is a The Empire Strikes Back cardback with 21 figures shown, and so on. Prop Store thanks The Star Collectors Archive and 12back.com for the reference information in this cardback guide.

DID YOU KNOW? | 3-PACKS

Kenner's Special Offer 3-packs are among the most coveted of all Star Wars toys ever made. Developed as a special department store program, the sets were first marketed in 1978 specifically for department store sales. This was during a time when toys were available at a wide variety of outlets such as toy stores, mom and pop shops, grocery stores, drug stores, and even hardware stores. In order to offer department stores their own specific promotion, three different 3-packs were created by constructing unique packaging that sold three figures at once. Although there are few strong memories of these being on store shelves, they were popular enough at the time to continue the line into 1979 with a set of 4-packs, but this time with special cardboard backdrops included in each. The packaging and figures were updated for The Empire Strikes Back, and different 3-packs were then created in 1980, 1981, and 1982, totaling sixteen different 3-packs in this collection. The line was originally slated to continue in 1983 with two 3-packs created for Return of the Jedi, but they never saw production.

DID YOU KNOW? | MULTI-PACKS

Multi-packs were a way for retailers to make a bulk sale on two or more figures at one time. Some multipacks were part of specific toy company sales promotions. Kenner released 2-, 3-, and 6-packs for direct retail sales for a limited time or in limited markets. Catalog retail stores such as Sears, JC Penney, and Montgomery Wards were well-known for their catalogue mail-order businesses and often created their own brand-specific multi-packs. Mainly available in plain white or unbleached cardboard, the packages themselves were fairly innocuous; but as toy grading has become more popular, the ability to show off the contents has greatly expanded interest in this previously small niche of collecting.

DID YOU KNOW? | BLUE SNAGGLETOOTH

As the demand for Star Wars toys was immediate right out of the gate, Kenner was in scramble mode to pump out action figures as quickly as possible. As it had been since the days when its designers had to literally take photos as they watched the film, Kenner was always lacking in strong reference material. The most famous instance of the company getting things wrong was with its Snaggletooth figure. Because Lucasfilm only sent Kenner a waist-up black-and-white photo that was barely visible, the designer had to make some assumptions. They made him tall, put him in a blue jumpsuit and completed the look with tall silver disco boots. The emblem on the belt buckle was taken from the designer's own business card and the figure went to production. Snaggletooth debuted in the 1979 Cantina Adventure Set from Sears, but was also available in a 2-pack catalogue mailer from Sears as well. Kenner had produced several thousands of these figures (the true number is unknown) before Lucasfilm had them correct it to something more closely resembling the onscreen character. The redesigned figure was then molded in red plastic with shortened legs and hairy paws based on an image from the 1978 Star Wars Holiday Special. However, the figure still was not a match. Although the Blue Snaggletooth (as history has named him) was shown in promotional literature and on the back of the French Meccano cardbacks, it was never made available on a blister card or available outside of the United States, thus making it a highly coveted figure for any Star Wars action figure collection.

DID YOU KNOW? | VLIX

From a unique character standpoint, the rarest production vintage Star Wars action figure was Vlix. This figure was originally prototyped by Kenner as part of the 2nd wave of Droids figures for 1986, but that series never made it to production. However, Vlix survived cancellation because Kenner sent the moulds to Glasslite in Brazil who released him as part of their small Droids line in 1988 and 1989, marking the true end of the vintage era. Vlix can exist as either a Kenner prototype or a Glasslite production figure and the quickest way to discern the two is that the prototype has unpainted toes whereas the Glasslite has fully gray painted boots. The Glasslite figure also comes with a specific and unique weapon - a black Hoth Snowtrooper rifle which is exceedingly rare. The Kenner prototype was planned to be packaged with an AT-AT Driver rifle, but is considered complete with or without that weapon.

344. Vlix First Shot AFA 85+ M

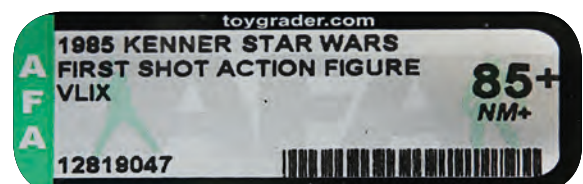

STAR WARS: DROIDS KENNER

Believed to be one of the rarest of all released Star Wars action figures. Vlix was released in very small quantities in Brazil during the late 1980's as part of Glasslite's Droids series. Kenner had planned to release Vlix as part of the second series of Droids figures, however the character was cancelled before it went into full production. Prototypes were produced when the line was set to be released, this version is a painted first shot.

346. A-Wing Fighter Cromalin AFA 85 M

STAR WARS: DROIDS KENNER

Cromalins are an integral part of the packaging design process and were created for almost all vintage Kenner Star Wars action figures, toys, and even a few displays. Their primary use would be for colour management and correction. Cromalin is a trade name for the DuPont material the image is printed on. It is heavy like photo paper and with a slight texture. When the design is printed on a Cromalin, the image will be quite vibrant, which makes it ideal for proofing the colors in the actual design.

DID YOU KNOW? | STORE DISPLAYS

Colourful and attention-grabbing, the store display was all about making people want a product. Advertising has always been in demand by collectors of all types and toys are no exception. In Star Wars especially, the amount of merchandise created is staggering and in many cases there was some kind of colorful display to help sell it. Countertop and Point of Purchase displays were designed to simultaneously display and advertise product while things like shelf talkers and mobiles were signage intended to draw attention. Because of the ephemeral nature of the display and the fragility of the materials used to create them, they were generally of limited availability and often easily damaged. The items by nature were made in limited quantities compared to the products they promoted and were never available for sale, but their graphics, artwork, and subject matter provide a fun trip down memory lane. And even for those that don't remember the displays or even the products at retail, the attraction of store displays in a collection is as attention-grabbing in the home as it was in the store aisles of yesteryear.

DID YOU KNOW? | LETRASET

The Letraset business was founded in London in 1959, introducing innovative media for commercial artists and designers. Their original product was the Letraset Type Lettering System. By 1961, Letraset's dry rub-down Instant Lettering was perfected. This was to be its core product for many years to come. Starting in 1964, Letraset also applied the dry rub-down transfer technique to create a children's game called Action Transfers. The Star Wars ranges were an unexpected hit and were probably the most successful transfer sets ever made with the art done by David Clark.

DID YOU KNOW? | CONVENTION EXCLUSIVES

Few things excite the Sci-Fi convention goer more than exclusives. They can be a huge draw for fans and collectors chasing limited edition items and are offered by various licensees or created for specific programmes in a convention. Most are available for purchase, but some convention exclusives are given away at no cost. For Star Wars Celebration specifically, some of the most coveted exclusives are distributed freely by The Collecting Track to attendees of the various collecting-related presentations. As a bonus, often a holder of some type is created to house the full set of giveaways for that year. Even scarcer are the special gift items created for contributing associates of the Collecting Track program. In this auction we have several examples of each from a few different Celebrations as noted.

DID YOU KNOW? | CAST AND CREW ITEMS

“Cast and Crew Items” is a broad phrase referring to any collectibles produced and made available exclusively to the cast and crew of a movie or TV production. Common examples of such items include hats, shirts and jackets branded with production logos.

Screening tickets and similar items that were issued to production crews are also considered cast and crew items. These pieces were primarily custom-made in low numbers and sometimes featured creative in-jokes or references to the working title of a production. Due to their limited supplies, cast and crew items are now among the most treasured items available to collectors.

1. Condition Terminology

MIB, MIMB (Mint in Box, Mint in Mint Box)

Typically refers to a mint condition toy in its original packaging. Does not mean factory sealed. MIMB denotes contents in mint condition inside a mint condition package.

MISB (Mint in Sealed Box)

Refers to a toy that is still factory-sealed. Being untouched, the contents are in mint condition.

MIP (Mint in Package)

Essentially the same as MIB (Mint in Box) and MOC (Mint on Card). It means only that the toy inside of the box is mint inside of the original packaging or box.

MOC, MOMC (Mint on Card, Mint on Mint Card)

Denotes toys that remain sealed on their original blister cards where the figure or toy is generally in unused condition. MOMC denotes that the card and bubble are also mint.

Heat-Sealed

Generally refers to how the bubble is affixed to the cardback. An ultrasonic welder compresses the plastic blister to the cardback and friction causes the pre-glued perimeter to bond to the cardback.

Waffle Pattern

The cross-hatched pattern seen on the sealed perimeter of an action figure bubble. The cross-hatching is created by the ultrasonic fixture used to seal the bubble to the card.

NOS (New Old Stock)

Refers to items that are in new and unused condition but are items from the period that they were originally manufactured.

YB, SYB (Yellow Bubble and Slightly Yellow Bubble)

Used to denote action figure bubbles (or blisters) that are no longer clear and have a yellow tint to them. The tinting can vary from slightly yellow to brown in some extreme instances.

Shipper / Shipping Box / Case / Shipping Case

Refers to cardboard boxes (or sometimes cardboard sleeves) that the toy company used to ship product to retail stores or distributors. Generally marked with appropriate logos and names.

Mail-away

Items offered by toy companies as premiums, usually in some type of redemption program. The item is often in a generic mailing box ships directly to the customer's home.

NRFB (Never Removed From Box)

Often refers to a toy that, while not being sealed, contains the original unused contents in their original sealed baggies with original inserts and paperwork.

Sealed / Tape Seal / Factory Sealed

Notation for a toy that retains its original glued or taped packaging. Contents would be mint and unused, although the outer packaging may not be in mint condition.

2. Grading Terminology

AFA (Action Figure Authority)

A US company which grades toys. Parent company is CGA (Collectibles Grading Authority). Toys are sealed in acrylic cases and feature a holographic label with the grade displayed. Other sub-companies are DGA (Diecast Grading Authority), DGA (Doll Grading Authority), and VGA (Video Game Authority). Each grading those respective types of items.

CAS (Collectors Archive Service)

A US grading company. CAS has expanded beyond grading, to custom cases and enclosed displays for showing off groups of items or unique ways to display single items. The also grade packaged and loose toys, similar to AFA.

UKG (UK Graders)

A grading company based in the UK. Typically UKG is used for grading packaged and loose action figures.

Sub-Grades

Graded action figures have sub-grades for the cardback, bubble, and the figure. The overall grade is not an average of the 3 sub-grades, but a determination of the overall condition. The sub-grades help show the weight of the individual contributions to the overall grade.

U Grade / U Grading

"U", for "Uncirculated", refers to a toy opened from its original packaging by the grading company and graded as loose. A controversial grading practice, opinions vary on the ethics of this practice. In some instances, U designates an item pulled from a sealed shipping case, which is generally more acceptable to collectors.

Y Designation

The letter Y appended to a grade (ex: AFA85Y) denotes that the blister/bubble has yellowed to a degree. The level of discolouration is not noted and can range from a slight tint to almost brown.

4. General Toy Collecting Terminology

Baggie

Action figures that were available via mail order, catalog order, and included in some toys were packed in small, clear plastic bags or “baggies”. These were tape sealed or heat sealed and vary widely in style, printing, and sealing styles.

Bootleg

Unlicensed products typically sold in secondary markets or gray-area primary markets. These are inexpensive copies of a licensed item, often with noticeable design differences.

Bubble / Blister

The clear covering that holds a toy to its cardback. Bubbles are vac-formed from plastic sheets and vary widely in size and shape depending on the toy it is designed to hold.

Cardback / Card / Backer / Backer Card

Refers to the flat piece of cardboard or cardstock onto which a plastic blister (or bubble) containing an action figure or toy would be attached.

Error

Anything denoting a notable mistake by the factory. For action figures, sometimes an incorrect accessory could be included, the figure could be in the bubble backwards, or there could be missed paint applications or a robe put on backwards.

Footer

The small piece of cardboard placed under the feet and/or between the legs of an action figure in its bubble or blister card packaging. This practice (and expense) was later eliminated from many toy lines of the 1980's.

Hanger Hole / Hang Tab / Tab / Punch Tab

The hole on the toy packaging that is designed to be hung on store pegs. Often hanger holes are diecut and cleanly removed or still resting in place. Some are perforated on one side so that the hanger tab does not fall off and create litter.

Insert / Cardboard Insert

An internal cardboard structure component that helps the box retain its shape and holds the contents in place on the toy's journey from the factory to the buyer's home.

In-Pack Catalog

A mini-catalog inserted into a boxed toy which shows off forthcoming product. These catalogs can vary by year and style and were designed to help sell additional products to excited children as they opened a new toy. Sometimes these catalogs show early prototypes of toys since they are printed well advance of future sales.

Knock-off

Typically confused with ‘bootleg’, a knock-off is an unlicensed item that is created in the style or theme of a known toy or licensed property.

Mis-card

A toy that has been packaged (typically an action figure) on the wrong cardback. This is generally the result of a factory error. Often confused for prototypes, mis-cards are production mistakes, not pre-production pieces.

Play Wear

Often used to describe more noticeable signs of wear that occur from playing with or roughly handling and storing toys.

POP (Proof of Purchase)

A small printed graphic/seal on toy packaging. Used in mail-in redemption programs, the customer would cut out this seal and mail one or more to the company for a promotional item. After the mid-1990's the UPC code would often serve as the POP.

Shelf Wear

A general description of overall damage on a toy's packaging. Usually corner nicks or scratches associated with being handled and moved in its original retail environment.

Short Shot / Short Pour

A term taken from the injection molding industry, a short shot is literally a “short” or reduced volume of plastic that is shot (injected) into the production mold. This can lead to improper fill of the mold and yield a deformed toy or accessory. Sometimes the item may appear short as the plastic fills all but the end, and sometimes deformation occurs. The term “short pour” is used by collectors to describe this issue. However, it is incorrectly used since the plastic is not poured into the mold.

Toy Fair

The American International Toy Fair is the annual event in New York City where toy manufacturers display their upcoming product lines for retailers to order.

Toy Toni

Figures that were not factory assembled, they were produced from 1990 onwards using all original components by Antoni Emchowicz aka Toy Toni.

UP, P (Unpunched, Punched)

In reference to blister cards made for hanging on retail pegs. This denotes the presence or absence of the cardboard making up the perforated or punched hanger hole.

Variation

A difference in the appearance of a toy as compared to a standard version. Variations can be any differences in such qualities as molding, design changes, colour, painting, paint application, accessory changes, and/or packaging differences.

Waffle Pattern

Typically seen on vintage Star Wars action figures, the waffle pattern is the distinctive pattern around the perimeter of the bubble where it is sealed to the cardback. The pattern is pressed into the plastic by the steel press used to attach it in production.

Window/Cel/Cellophane

The clear cellophane sheet used to display the inner contents of a packaged toy. This allows for the toy to be completely sealed while remaining visible to the consumer.

5. Toy Manufacturing and Production Terminology

COO / Country of Origin

Where the toy was made. For instance: Hong Kong, Taiwan, Macau, China, Mexico. There are also cases where there is no COO present.

Deco

Decorating a part, usually with paint or printing.

Die

A die is the steel tooling used to stamp out or shape metal. Things like coins and small metal parts are made with dies. They are made of hardened steel for long use.

Duplicating Aid

Cast in a hard resin material, directly from a hardcopy or pattern, this item is a negative of the part (a cavity) and is used to create the production mold. The duplicating aid is then used as an aid to cut the steel production mold and that is achieved by tracing the contours of the duplicating aid with a pantograph that is tied to the cutting head of a milling machine.

Factory Painting / Spray Op / Production Painted

A “spray operation” denotes the process of applying a single colour onto a toy. The colours are sprayed on using a paint mask. Production paint is done by hand with a small paint gun or airbrush gun. Very small and fine features like eyeballs and eyelashes on dolls are often applied by hand with a paint brush.

Glossary

Mold Cavity / Cavity Lettering

The hollow area in the mold that produces the shape of the plastic part is the mold cavity. Often molds have multiple cavities and they are numbered for traceability during production. Because the cavities are made and finished individually by hand there can be differences which lead to what collectors call “molding variations”.

Paint Mask

A paint mask is used to cover all areas of a part except those that are to be painted a certain colour. A different paint mask is used for each colour required.

There are 2 basic types – a plate mask and a book mask.

Produced / Production

Denotes an item that was created for mass production and sold at retail stores.

Overspray

Excess paint that goes around a paint mask. Generally overspray will be faint and around the edges of the particular colour that's being applied.

Pantograph

A pantograph is used to trace the contours of a tooling master (in the case of coins) or duplicating aid and scale it as the shape is cut into steel to create the production mold.

Protomold / Protomolded

A protomolded (PM) item is a part or figure that was created totally in-house during development. The mold was made of aluminum, made in-house and the part was injection molded in-house as well. The plastic used on these parts was fairly ductile and was almost always white. With the ability to create PM samples in-house, a company can more easily translate their ideas into plastic. Internal First Shot is a collector-derived term for the same.

Plastic Injection Molding

The manufacturing process by which plastic pellets are melted and injected into a mold under high temperature and pressure in order to create a plastic part. There is much ancillary equipment required for this process and generally requires a production environment.

Roto-mold / Rotational Mold

Process that uses a power or liquid vinyl poured into a mold that is heated and rotated in many axes so that the vinyl coats the inside of the mold. After partial solidification, the warm and flexible part is pulled from the bottom of the mold. Baby doll heads are the most common example of a roto-molded part.

Silicone (RTV) Mold

Silicone molds are made from the original wax sculpting of the figure in order to produce hard copies. The molds are made by hand and each part of the figure requires a 2-part mold to be made which allows for easy removal of the cast part once it has set. RTV stands for “room temperature vulcanisation” which just means that the mold material itself (usually some type of silicone) will cure, at room temperature, without requiring external heat.

Sonic Welding / Ultrasonic Welding

A process that uses high-frequency sound waves to melt 2 plastic parts together to form a bond. The clamped parts are subjected to focused vibrations which cause friction and heat which melts or welds the item together. For action figures the front and back torso halves are welded together using this process.

Steel Mold / Production Mold

The injection mold used to create a plastic part. These molds are used in production facilities and often create multiple parts at once in individual “cavities”. The cavities are usually feature numbers or letters that transfer to the final part. These include copyright information and cavity IDs. Due to the high heat, temperature, pressure, and longevity, steel molds are required for production.

Unproduced

Any item that was developed with the intent to be sold in stores, but was canceled for reasons such as forecast changes, cost, or approval problems. Generally, toys that went all the way to the production mold phase, but still went unmade are considered unproduced. Sometimes small run concept items are considered unproduced since their design was never used.

Vacu-Formed / Vacu-Formed

Creating a plastic part by pulling a heated sheet of plastic around a form by using a vacuum. This process is generally low-cost and limits design potential. Old Halloween masks are good examples of vac-formed pieces.

Variation / Variant

Denotes a difference between two toys of the same type. A variation can be obvious or small and the significance of the variation is often in the eye of the beholder. Major variations may constitute noticeable changes to a sculpting, paint colours, fabric colours or types, cardback photo or artwork differences, accessory colours, and plastic colour differences. More subtle variations may include small details in molding differences, copyright location differences, etc... It is important to recognise that time and environmental conditions can cause colour changes in toys and that these are not actual variations, but artifacts of the aging process.

Vendor

Most toys are often actually manufactured contract manufacturing companies, generally in low cost countries. The toy company (Kenner, Hasbro, etc) does the development and distribution and the vendors make the actual product. These company names are largely kept secret and never appear on the consumer goods.

6. Prototype Terminology

2-up

An item made at two times the intended size of the production item. Generally to facilitate ease of sculpting. Some action figures were sculpted as 2-ups.

4-up

An item made at 4 times the intended size of the production item. The Micro Collection figures were exclusively sculpted at this scale in order to capture the proper detailing and to make parting lines easier to determine given the action poses involved.

6-up

An item made at six times the intended size of the production item. The Power of the Force coins were sculpted at this scale in order to capture fine details like fur, hair, and facial and clothing features.

Acetate

A hard, plastic-like material used for the sculpting of toys and model kits. Working with the hard material required cutting machines and was a removal process, as opposed to the additive and removal process of working in traditional wax. Acetate was also used to make patterns in some cases for lines like Kener's Fast111's. Most acetate sculptings are fashioned from numerous individual parts.

Bench Shot

A Bench Shot is a figure that was injection molded at the shop where the mold was being made and predates those figures that are molded at the production factory. Whenever a mold is being made and/or worked on they say it's “on the bench” meaning the workbench in the shop, hence the term. It means that it was “shot” (industry slang for injection molded) on the bench, but not literally on the bench.

Carbalon

2-part epoxy resin used to make hardcopies. It is identified by its tan to brown colour range. Added pigment dictates the depth of colour. It can be lighter tan as well. Carbalon is a trade name of the material and it features a smooth finish.

Carded Sample

Action figures were often placed on proof or production cards to represent the appearance of the final product. Often, the figures did not match the cards used, since employees would often use whatever was on hand at that moment. Carded samples can contain regular production figures or various pre-production figures such as first shots that may have been on hand.

Colour Bars

Colour bars are the square coloured blocks seen on the sides of uncut printing sheets and are a way to monitor the progressive colour builds and keep the colours accurate across a large print run. The bars usually consist of C M Y K (Cyan Magenta Yellow and Black) plus any spot colours and also the “progressive build” of the individual colours. All are useful for debugging printing problems.

Glossary

Cromalin

A Cromalin is a printing proof made for colour management and layout corrections and are often hand marked. Cromalin is a trade name for is special DuPont paper in which the individual colours are printed on separate films and bonded together. It is heavy like photo paper, has a slight texture and a vibrant image which makes it ideal for proofing the colours in the actual design.

Dynacast

Dynacast is the trade name of a type of material used to make hardcopies. Its most noticeable characteristic is its green colour which makes it easy to identify. It is a 2-part urethane material that was widely used by Kenner and its contractors during the late 1970s and early 1980s. The colour was a pigment added in order to show off a figure's detailing and can vary in shade. The material itself dries to be very hard, but also very brittle. It almost feels like a type of ceramic.

Engineering Pilot (EP)

An EP is among the first toys made in a production environment with production tooling. The term “pilot” means first, like the pilot episode of a TV show. Generally the figure is indistinguishable from a production figure since it is made the same way. The primary indicating feature of an EP is the presence of hand-written numbers or letters on the feet denoting their use as test specimens. Some known abbreviations are “A” (aged) and “U” (unaged). Meaning that they were baked to accelerate environmental impacts.

First Shot (FS)

One of the early injection-molded prototype toys. First Shots sometimes lack copyright dates or foot holes; might be molded in odd colours; and can be unpainted and even non-sonically-welded.

Hand Painted

Hand-painting on toy prototypes almost always is done in-house at the toy company. These can be painted hardcopies made internally or even painted First Shots that have been received by the overseas factory. Often the paint used is of different type than production paint and can be identified by brush strokes and irregular edges.

Hardcopy (HC)

A hardcopy is a (hard) resin copy of the original sculpting and made from silicone molds taken from the sculpting. They are cast, painted, finished, and assembled by hand at the toy company. Holes are drilled in each part and the limbs and head are held on with steel dowel pins. Hardcopies are used as approval samples and also serve as tooling aids for creating the production steel molds. Painted hard copies serve as paint masters to relay colour schemes. Because there is no shrinkage involved in casting a hardcopy, it is dimensionally identical to the original wax sculpting and will be slightly larger than the final production toy.

Internal First Shot (IFS)

A term coined by collectors. For the proper term see Protomolded or Protomolded.

Kit-bash

This is a model-maker's term, used to refer to anything that's been built using parts culled from other sources – toys, model kits and frequently used during the conceptual stages of development to help flesh out the idea of a toy in three dimensions. For quick conceiving purposes a model maker may take apart some pre-existing toys, cannibalize some old model kits, or simply root through his tool box, looking for appropriate-looking parts with which to build the model.

Paint Master

A paint master is a figure that is fully painted in the correct scheme and in the correct colours. The figure itself can be a hardcopy, internal first shot, or first shot. This master shows the manufacturing vendor how the final toy should look. The vendor creates the proper paint masks and makes sure the paint that will be used is the correct colour. The paint master usually is accompanied by a set of paint swatches.

Paint Swatch / Paint Chip

Paint swatches are small plastic wafers which are hand painted a solid colour on one side and corresponds to one of the colours to be used on an action figure. Each different colour present on an action figure must be accounted for by an individual swatch. On the backside of each wafer you will typically find a small handwritten sticker noting the figure's name and sometimes the part of the body which will receive that particular colour. Paint swatches are generally found, linked as a group, on small chains to keep them together.

Pattern

Whereas sculptings are used to capture the essence of organic objects, patterns are used to create weapons, ships, or other mechanical things. Wood or synthetic material is meticulously crafted to represent the final shape and includes every small detail and protrusion seen on a toy. Once the basic shape is established, the pattern makers begin the tedious process of adding the minute details in small wood or shaping filler putty. From the pattern, an epoxy “duplicating aid” is cast which is directly traced (like an LP record) to cut the steel production mold.

Photoart

This term refers to any photograph that has been modified or enhanced using manual techniques, such as painting or airbrushing, in order to make it easier to reproduce in printed form. These days, most photo manipulation is done via computer programs such as Adobe Photoshop. During the vintage Star Wars era, Kenner employed photoart for almost all of the images used on their toy packages and advertising signage. This is the master image used on packaging for a specific toy.

Photo Sample

Term used to describe the toy example that was used by a photographer to create packaging or marketing materials for a toy line. Typically these are sourced directly from the original photographer and can often be matched to a specific image by close examination to paint or molding flaws found in the figure. Also, sometimes remnants of wax are found in the hands or foot holes from the original photoshoot. Some photo samples have had paint or colour retouching by the photo studio in order to enhance edges or to provide contrast. Generally speaking, the toy itself is not an actual prototype.

Plastic Swatch

A plastic swatch is a sample piece that is used to relay the look and feel of the material being chosen to determine whether or not it is suitable for a particular use. A sticker affixed to the sample would show manufacturer name and the material code and are produced by the actual plastic resin manufacturer. One or more of these swatches could be used to describe the requirements of a single action figure or toy.

Proof Card

A proof card (or proof) is an early printing of an action figure cardback. Generally proofs are printed on slightly thinner cardstock and the bottom corners remain square. Often proofs do not have glossy backs as they are mainly for showcasing the front image of the card and some proofs are not printed on the back at all. All proofs are printed on a large sheet and individually cut. Sometimes proofs are found that have not been die-cut from the sheet and have much of the white bordering around them. These were usually the result of a person hand cutting an entire sheet just to separate the individual cards.

Proof Sheet

A proof sheet is an entire sheet that is printed with several individual proof cards. The sheets usually were printed with 8 cards shown front and back. There is quite a bit of white space between adjacent cards so that there were no problems with separating them. Around each proof image small grid lines and tick marks can be seen which allows the printer to know the exact placement of the image. Typically, on the edge of a proof card you will see colour bars which show the basic colours used for printing which are cyan, magenta, yellow, and black.

Protomolded / Protomolded Figure (PM)

An prototype sample made from low yield molds in the company model shop. Often the plastic is of a different type and the toy would be handpainted. Protomold is the industry term whereas IFS was developed by collectors and sometimes still used.

Prototype / Pre-production

A loosely defined and general term used to denote the various output created during the development of the toy line and can span a wide array of different items such as mock-ups, drawings, proofs, molds, etc...

Repro-10

An polyurethane type of material used to make hardcopies. It can be identified by it's dark black colouring.

Glossary

Sculpting / Wax Sculpting / Wax

Typically action figures sculptings are made of wax which is a malleable material that can be formed, removed from, and added to with ease. Often an original action figure sculpting is done over an internal brass armature and the limbs are attached with steel pins into embedded plastic discs so that the joints are smooth. Colours and consistency may vary due to sculptor or company preferences. Some sculptings are done completely in wax if they are for items that are posed or otherwise static in their final form.

Softcopy (a “Rubber”)

Collectors coined this term to describe the byproduct of one step in the process of tooling the Power of the Force coins. The Kenner employees called these “rubbers”. In essence, a softcopy is a thin silicone positive. From the sculpting, a hardcopy would be directly cast and would be the negative image of the coin. It is from this negative hardcopy that a positive softcopy would be produced. Only the coin image would be present on these steps as the text would be added in at the very last stage when the steel die is cut.

Spec Sheet / Product Sheet

A Kenner product sheet, usually referred to as a “spec sheet” would normally be part of a 3-ring notebook containing early photography and descriptions of Star Wars toys. Each sheet has the same format with typed information about the product and a pasted-on glossy photo. Most photos are representations of the toys but they often differed from their released counterparts which makes it quite unique to look at. These were generally mock-ups of sorts created because the toys weren’t ready in time for photography and early marketing.

Squeezing

A “squeezing” is the industry term for the earliest 1:1, three-dimensional figure made from the production tooling for the Star Wars Micro Collection line. The name derives from the process of making them— a resin paste is pressed into the mold cavity and the two halves are squeezed together to form the figure. Squeezings were used to test the molds and to make early samples that were often painted by hand.

Styrene Model

Conceptual 3D representation of a proposed vehicle, playset, or other mechanical accessory. Hand built from sheets of styrene plastic as well as other plastics that could be cut or machined. This type of item has largely given way to 3D printing due to speed and efficiency, but can be found in cases where the toy or mechanism is constructed from scratch rather than being computer modeled first.

Test Shot

This is a term used by collectors, but the proper industry term is actually First Shot.

Tooling Master

The tooling master is the hardcopy that will be used as the pattern for cutting the production steel molds. This hardcopy would be in perfect condition without any noticeable flaws. The tooling master would be used to create epoxy duplicating aids and the steel production mold would be cut using the duplicating aid as a guide.

Vendor Supplied Prototype (VSP)

A vendor supplied prototype is another term for a first shot. This term comes from the fact that the piece is a prototype manufactured by the vendor and supplied to the toy company. Since the vendor’s only purpose is to create the production molds and run production of a toy, the only type of prototype that they could produce is a first shot. Generally VSP’s are not painted. The term VSP has been used more for 1990’s items and not so much for vintage items.

Wax Cast / Casting

A casting made by pouring liquid wax into a silicone mold made from the original sculpting. A wax cast could be used as a copy to rework a design or it could be simply extra wax that was poured into the mold to help the mold retain its shape. Or more benignly, was just an interesting way to use up extra wax. Often castings are rough and unfinished, often with excessive flashing at the parting line.

7. Store Display Terminology

Bin

A cardboard display box the manufacturer ships filled and ready for display.

A colourful header card helped advertise the visible product. Used on store shelves and counters.

Hanger / Bell Hanger / Bell / Mobile

A 2-sided cardboard display sign that hung from the ceiling or from a bracket attached to a high rack or shelf. Sometimes these were also clamped at the top of wire racks.

Header / Header Card

The largest type of Kenner store display, they are flat and usually made of heavy cardboard and could be either hung from a ceiling fixture or mounted to a shelving unit.

Point of Purchase (POP)

Used to describe store displays that are intended to be displayed next to the product – essentially, at the point (location) of purchase.

Shelf Talker

Plastic or paper advertisement that overhangs the edge of a shelf. Thin paper ones fit in a standard plastic holder and plastic or thick paper ones adhere directly to the shelf.

8. Star Wars Collecting Terminology

When collecting Star Wars you will inevitably come across some abbreviations or terms that you may not recognise. Below is a list of common ones you should learn. Some are easy to figure out and others not so much.

Vintage – In the Star Wars collecting world, “vintage” refers to items produced before 1990 and corresponds with items made surrounding the marketing campaigns of the original Trilogy.

- ANH – A New Hope (a.k.a. Star Wars or SW)
- ESB – Empire Strikes Back (also TESB)
- ROTJ – Return of the Jedi
- POTF – Power of the Force
- Ewok Preschool / Wicket the Ewok – 1984 Kenner preschool-age toy lines
- Droids – 1985/86 cartoon series and toy line
- Ewoks – 1985/86 cartoon series and toy line
- Caravan of Courage – 1984 live action made for TV movie
- Battle For Endor – 1985 live action made for TV movie

Back

This is a way of identifying action figure packaging by referring to how many figures are displayed on the back of the card. When the figures first came out, there were only 12 different figures available for purchase. As they produced different figures, more became available and the backs were changed to reflect that. 12, 20, 21, 31, 32, 41, 45, 47, 48, 65, 77, 79, 92 and 93 are all the different backs you may find. You may also find suffixes with the number such as 12C. The letter denotes a change in the card and is a designation created by collectors in order to differentiate the packaging. This can be as simple as a sticker being added at the factory or a description being slightly changed.

Double-Telescoping (DT) Lightsaber

This refers to the two-piece lightsabers for the action figures of Darth Vader, Obi Wan Kenobi and Luke Skywalker. These figures are often valued at thousands of dollars.

Early Bird Kit

The first Star Wars action figure product for Christmas 1977. It was a cardboard sleeve and stand with a coupon that you mailed in to receive 4 action figures between Feb-May 1978. The figures were Luke Skywalker, Princess Leia, Chewbacca, and R2-D2 and were sent in a plain white box with a vac-formed tray. The set also included a bag of white pegs that fit into the base of the cardboard stand.

First 12

This refers to the first 12 characters produced in the line. The packaging back shows 12 action figures.

Last 17

This refers to the last 17 characters produced. The last 17 was the end of the line for Vintage Star Wars action figures and as such not as many of them were produced. This makes them a little more desirable than many of the other figures simply because most children had aged out of toys by the time these were released in 1985.

Micro Collection

From 1980-1982 Kenner created 1.25" scale figures that featured action poses and were made of diecast metal. They were part of small diorama-style sets that connected together formed small "worlds". The Death Star, Hoth, and Bespin worlds included multiple playsets and accompanying figures. There was also a mail-away set of 6 Snowtrooper and Rebel Soliders available as army builders. There were several other sets planned for the Micro Collection which were unproduced and included a Jabba the Hutt Dungeon. The earliest Micro Collection development included a Dagobah set that never went beyond the concept stage.

Tri-Logo / Bi-Logo / Tri-POTF

Tri-Logo cards have the Return of the Jedi (ROTJ) logo in English, French and Spanish. They were largely available in Europe, but were also imported into the United States at Kaybee Toys, as close-out items during the end of the run. The Bi-Logo packaging featured the ROTJ logo in French and Spanish. There is also a Tri-Logo style of Power of the Force (POTF) packaging which also features English, French, and Spanish languages.

Vintage

In the world of Star Wars and Star Wars collecting, vintage refers to the time period of the original trilogy of films and their associated products. The vintage time is typically said to begin in 1977, although there are pre-release materials from 1976. The Kenner trilogy film toy line ended in 1985 but 1986 ushered in their wave of Ewoks and Droids cartoon figures which featured carryovers like Boba Fett and A-Wing Pilot. 1987 and 1988 saw the unlicensed line of action figures Turkey and the true end of the vintage period is 1989 which saw the last products released in Brazil (Power of the Force and Droids action figures). It is for these reasons that the definition of vintage is anything made before 1990.

Vinyl Cape (VC) Jawa

The original release of the Jawa action figure was fitted with a light brown vinyl cape similar to the other vinyl capes used at the time. The figure was a limited release and was changed to a cloth cape to give more value to customers. The bubble used is very narrow and there is a plastic sheet behind to protect from colour transfer from the yellow background. The cape is a tan colour and lighter than the Ben Kenobi cape. There is a rare Australian (Toltoys) version that was available during the ESB era that featured a darker brown cape. The Toltoys VC Jawa figure itself is made of a type of plastic that shows green age spots.

Vlix

This action figure was originally part of a planned, but unproduced, second series of Droids action figures. It was only available in 1988 and 1989.

UDE

This collector-defined term is shorthand for Unproduced Droids and Ewoks and is used to describe the unreleased second series of those toy lines from Kenner.

How An Action Figure is Made

Given the ubiquity of action figures as pop-culture mementos, few people besides the experts actually know how they are created. At Prop Store, we consider these “products” to be testaments to the craft and artistry of their creators, designers, and manufacturers.

But how are action figures made, exactly? Well, thanks to Chris Georgoulas of 12Back.com and Tommy Garvey of the Star Wars Collectors Archive blog, we have a clearer look at this process than ever. While not every action figure is made with precisely the same tools or goals, Garvey explains that “toy production is a pretty standard enterprise, no matter the character or line.” With that in mind, here is a digestible overview of the incredible engineering feats required to make our favorite toys (with major, um, props to Georgoulas and Garvey):

Step 1: Creating The Character

“If you wish to make [an] action figure from scratch, you must first create” the character on which the figure is based, says Garvey. The “birth” of any original toy begins with a series, film, or book; or with “a few simple photos or drawings” from which a sculptor pulls a 3-D representation. A Luke Skywalker toy made by Kenner, for example, would not exist without the creation of Skywalker and the casting of Mark Hamill by George Lucas, the mastermind behind Star Wars. Sometimes a character is well-developed during pre-production, which may inform its appearance and behavior before any script is even written. In the case of Star Wars, toy companies were among the first to receive such details so they could prepare promotional action figures.

Step 2: Mock-Ups

Some toys and action figures are conceptualised with the “kit bash” method. This term is taken from modeling where one would use parts from different kits in order to build a model vehicle. These “bashed” figures are generally used as design concept mock-ups and offer a method for designers to clarify details in their molds without having to spend a large amount of time developing the basic figure or toy. Depending on quality, sometimes these mock-ups are utilised in early product photography.

Step 3: Character Designs & Concept Art

Toy companies often rely on early sketches and designs when crafting their action figures. But just as often, a team of in-house character designers and artists will produce design sheets for potential toys.

Step 4: Original Sculpting

Once the design and reference images are available work can begin to create the 3-D representation of the figure. Often sculptors will use clay to rough out a general shape and then make a quick silicone mold of the clay step. This mold is filled with a proprietary wax blend and it is at this point where the fine sculpting can begin in wax. Some sculptings have a embedded armature or “buck” which is created by engineering to help align the major joints. Often the sculptor will embed plastic discs at the joints to create smooth mating surfaces. Using various tools the sculptor shapes the wax until the final desired shape is achieved. Also, it should be noted that sculptings are created larger than the intended size due to plastic shrinkage. Typically for action figures the sculptings are approximately 3% larger.

Step 5: Silicone Mold

Because the wax sculpting is very fragile and multiple copies need to be created for successive stages, it is necessary to create a mold to make them. Silicone molds of each individual figure piece are made by hand from the original wax sculpting of each figure. The 2-part silicone mold is made entirely by hand and if done carefully, the original sculpting can be removed and retained. The mold halves come together at the “parting line” which is established by the sculptor, often by tracing on the sculpting itself. This is also first step to verifying that the part can be extracted from a mold for production. The two halves are created with keying features to aid in alignment during pouring and curing. These molds can usually only yield a small number of cast parts before they become damaged or degrade.

Step 6: Hard Copy

A “hard copy” is a polyurethane copy of the original sculpting made from a silicone mold. The polyurethane is typically harder and heavier than the plastic used on production figures (hence, hard copy). Per Georgoulas, “All hard copies are hand-cast, hand-painted, and hand-assembled by the people involved in the design process.” Each part of a hard copy must be cleaned up and sanded at the joints, and holes must be drilled in them, so that the limbs and head can be individually prepped for assembly. Hard copies are primarily used as “approval samples and, more importantly, the unpainted ones serve as tooling aids for creating steel molds. Painted hard copies [also] serve as paint masters so the production folks will know what part gets painted a certain color, or what plastic base color to use.” Painted hardcopies are also used in early Marketing and catalog photography and have even been used for television commercials.

Step 7: Protomolded Samples

Because action figures and toys are typically made of plastic and need durability, flexibility or simply require many pieces to be made, another method to create prototypes was sometimes used. The company model shop or contract shop would make low-yield aluminum prototype molds so that they could create samples that were more like the final, production version of the toy. Aluminum would be used because it is easy to machine and even though it is quite soft compared to tool steel, it is robust enough to withstand the pressures and wear of injection molding for the short time it will be used. In the case of a ship or playset component, a protomolded part would fit the bill as it could have the same material properties to validate true end function. In the case of action figures, it allowed multiples to be easily made and these figures were much more durable than a hardcopy. Typically the plastic used was a natural (off-white) color which was cheap and allowed for it to be easily painted. Sometimes the joint style would vary from a production figure and parts might be removable, but for photography or sample purposes these were perfect ways to validate a design by being that much closer in material and manufacture to the final version of the toy.

How An Action Figure is Made

Step 8: Production Molds

Each part of any figure requires a 2-part steel mold to be made. Several “sub molds” or “cavities” are created and placed inside a larger mold “frame”. This also allows for the use of generic-sized frames and cavities that fit many different parts of the figure. Multiple molds can then be made in order to increase production yields; as a result, different steel molds or mold cavities are sometimes used for identical figures. There is an interim step between the hardcopy and the production mold to create the “duplicating aid” which is essentially a urethane negative made from the hardcopy. The duplicating aid is a negative much like the silicone mold. Durable tool steel is cut using a 3-D pantograph which traces the duplicating aid and relays its contours to a milling machine, which then uses fine cutting tools to remove material and create the mold. For some parts like heads where fine detailing is difficult to capture via material removal, the production mold can be cast. Kenner, for example, often used Beryllium Copper to create these types of molds.

Step 9: First Shots

“First shots” are the very first plastic figures to come from the production molds. While they may be hand painted or factory painted, many first shots are not painted or even unassembled. First shots are made by an injection molding process where tiny plastic pellets of plastic are compressed under heat and pressure and forced into the mold. After the plastic is shot into the mold it is allowed to cool and it shrinks a small amount. Once fully cooled, ejector pins in the mold push the figure out of the mold cavity and the cycle continues. Because they are preliminary pieces, any color of plastic can be used to mold them. First shots are essentially identical to production figures, but not all of them are “sonic welded” together or even painted. Often they are produced from the mold before the copyright information has been added to it making them easier to identify. Due to the fast pace of development at this phase, first shots can vary widely in terms of look and completeness.

Step 10: Hand-Painting and Factory Painting

Once the first shots have completely cooled, they can be hand-painted for sampling purposes and that is typically done at the toy company rather than at the factory. Factory painting is also done by hand, but with air brushes and paint masks to isolate different areas for color. For every different color that is put on a part, a different paint mask is used. Some hand painting like fine details is often done by hand at the factory.

Step 11: Sonic Welding

Once the molded figure is ready to be assembled, all components are gathered and clamped on the torso through ultrasonic-welding. In this process, the assembled figure is subjected to high-frequency sound waves which vibrate the seams of the plastic and cause friction, thus high focused heat which welds the figure together. Once this process is completed, the torso halves are joined and the figure can not be pulled apart.

Step 12: Package Design

Designing and proofing the packages for action figures is its own art, albeit the largely physical methods used decades ago has largely given way to faster digital methods. Methods vary widely, but generally in the true copy and paste of yesteryear, physical elements are drawn or assembled in layers on an art board, often with transparent or translucent overlays. Different aspects of a character’s packaging – photo art, logo, text, special offers – are laid out on the board and detailed. This layered creation is then photographed to merge all of the various elements. Next, the approved layout is sent to the printer to color correct and proof text. Once the printer and the designers have collaborated and corrected imperfections in text or design, a Cromalin print is made to check the color balance and help develop the printing plates. From these plates, a “proof card” sample can be created which is usually identical to an production cardback and used for further verifications. Once approved the production printing can begin.

Step 13: Packaging Samples

After the components have been developed it is time to create packaged samples for further review, evaluation and even testing purposes. Depending upon the desired purpose, sometimes older packaging is used on newer figures. Often these samples can feature bubbles from other figures which can be factory applied or even hand applied with glue or sometimes two-sided tape. Packaged samples can be used to test how well figures travel and if they can adequately protect against paint rubs. Packaging samples can also be used for catalog photography as well as for presentation purposes.

Step 14: Production Release

Once the various phases have been approved, the final step is to put the parts together on a production line and ship them. Generally toys of this type are made by contract toy manufacturers in Asia and these companies can work for many different toy manufacturers. Shipments take place, action figures are purchased in stores and a lifetime’s worth of play memories are created by children (and collectors) around the world.

The balance will then be split over 1, 2 or 3 months per the Buyer's selection. If the 1 month option is selected, the remaining balance on the Lot will be due 30 days after the deposit date. If the 2 month option is selected, half of the remaining balance will be due 30 days after the deposit date and the remaining half 30 days after that, and so on.

716. Although Prop Store shall use reasonable efforts to take care when selecting third parties for these purposes, the Buyer will contract directly with such third party and Prop Store accepts no liability or responsibility for the acts or omissions of any such third parties. Similarly, where Prop Store suggests other handlers, packers or carriers, its suggestions are made on the basis of its general experience of such parties in the past and Prop Store is not responsible to any person to whom it has made a recommendation for the acts or omissions of the third party concerned.

717. It is the Buyer's sole obligation and responsibility to be aware of, to comply with, and to pay for all relevant import duties, taxes, VAT, customs and other fees charged in the Buyer's local jurisdiction. Prop Store will ship all packages with the full value of the Lot declared. Buyer understands and agrees that Prop Store shall have no obligation or responsibility for any import duties, taxes, VAT, customs, shipping or other charges for the Lots shipped. Failure by the Buyer to pay all necessary amounts may result in the relevant authorities returning the Lot to Prop Store and in those circumstances the Buyer will be charged and will pay storage cost and Prop Store's additional reasonable costs and expenses.

718. It is the Buyer's responsibility to ensure that any Lot purchased from Prop Store enters the shipping location lawfully, that all duties and taxes have been paid and that all required export procedures, regulations, and laws were properly complied with. Buyer understands and agrees that Prop Store shall have no obligation or responsibility for complying with any export procedures, regulations, or laws applicable to the Lot.

719. Unless otherwise agreed by Prop Store in writing, the fact that the Buyer wishes to apply for an export licence does not affect or postpone the Buyer's obligation to make payment in accordance with Prop Store's payment terms nor Prop Store's right to charge interest or storage charges on late payment. If the Buyer requests Prop Store to apply for an export licence on his or her behalf, Prop Store shall be entitled to make a charge and be paid for this service. Prop Store shall not be obliged to rescind or cancel a sale nor to refund any monies paid by the Buyer to Prop Store as a result of or related to the Buyer's failure or inability to obtain an export license.

720. Where Lots are not collected within 14 calendar days from the due date of payment, whether or not payment has been made, a storage fee of 3% of the Hammer Price per month shall be charged to the Buyer. If the Buyer has failed to pay the Purchase Price and the cost of shipping and handling, Prop Store, at its option may cancel the sale.

8. Use of information

8.1. Prop Store will hold all personal information provided by the Bidder at registration and the Bidder agrees and consents to such information being used by Prop Store to:

8.1.1. make available each Lot for shipping to the Buyer;

8.1.2. process the Buyer's payment;

8.1.3. contact credit reference agencies and keep records of any searches carried out on Prop Store's behalf;

8.1.4. where explicit consent has been given, inform the Bidder about upcoming auctions and news (please contact Prop Store by email at support@propstore.com or by phone +44 (0)1494 766485 if you wish to stop receiving these);

8.1.5. inform the Bidder about important auction updates;

9. Liability

9.1. If Prop Store fails to comply with these Conditions it is responsible for loss or damage a Buyer suffers that is a foreseeable result of Prop Store's breach or its negligence. Prop Store is not responsible for any loss or damage that is not foreseeable. Loss or damage is foreseeable if an obvious consequence of Prop Store's breach or if contemplated by the Buyer and Prop Store at the time the hammer falls on the Lot at the Auction.

9.2. Subject to condition 9.3, Prop Store's liability shall be limited to the amount actually paid for the Lot by the Buyer. Save to the extent required by law, in no event shall Prop Store be liable for incidental or consequential damages of any kind.

9.3. Prop Store does not exclude or limit its liability for:

9.3.1. death or personal liability caused by its negligence or the negligence of its employees, agents or subcontractors;

9.3.2. fraud or fraudulent misrepresentation; and

9.3.3. breach of the terms implied by sections 12, 13, 14 and 15 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 (title, description, quality and fitness for purpose) save to the fullest extent permissible at law.

Terms & Conditions

10. Terms of Guarantee of Attribution

10.1. Prop Store warrants the attribution of each Lot as stated in the title block (film title and item title) of that Lot in the Auction catalogue, subject to any revisions (which may be given in writing or online before or during the Auction at which the Lot is purchased by the Buyer); this is Prop Store's Guarantee of Attribution. Buyers should be aware that multiple examples of props and costumes are frequently used during production and it is often impossible to determine whether a specific piece has been used on-camera. Any specific on-camera usage known to Prop Store will be noted within the description, but no warranties are given by Prop Store on that description.

10.2. If a Buyer demonstrates, to Prop Store's reasonable satisfaction, that the Guarantee of Attribution is materially incorrect, the sale will be rescinded if the Lot is returned to Prop Store in the same condition in which it was at the time of sale. In order to satisfy Prop Store that the Guarantee of Attribution is materially incorrect, Prop Store reserves the right to require the Buyer to obtain, at the Buyer's expense, the opinion of two experts in the field, mutually acceptable to Prop Store and the Buyer.

10.3. In the event a sale is rescinded in accordance with condition 10.2, Prop Store shall repay to the Buyer the Purchase Price. Repayment of the Purchase Price shall be the Buyer's sole remedy for an incorrect Guarantee of Attribution, to the exclusion of all other remedies to the extent permissible at law. It is specifically understood that this will be considered the Buyer's sole remedy under this clause 10.

10.4. The Buyer expressly agrees that Prop Store shall not be liable in whole or in part, for, and the Buyer shall not be entitled to recover, any special, indirect, incidental or consequential damages including loss of profits or value of investment or opportunity cost.

10.5. Bidders are aware that description revisions may occur on some Lots, and should inquire before the Auction whether any description revisions have occurred on a given Lot and/or examine a lot before bidding on it. Prop Store will make all reasonable efforts to make description revisions readily available during the Auction.

10.6. Except as expressly provided in these Conditions Prop Store shall have no liability to the Buyer in respect of a Lot and all and any implied warranties and conditions are excluded to the fullest extent permitted by law.

11. Intellectual property rights

11.1. The copyright in all images, illustrations and written material produced by or for Prop Store relating to a Lot (including the contents of the Auction catalogue), is and shall remain at all times the property of Prop Store and shall not be used by the Buyer, nor by anyone else, without Prop Store's written consent. Prop Store and the Seller make no representation or warranty that the Buyer of a Lot will acquire any copyright or other reproduction rights in it.

11.2. In the catalogue descriptions, Prop Store takes steps to identify and provide provenance for Lots offered at auction. In many cases, the Lots offered were used in or in conjunction with motion pictures or other programmes and information is furnished in order to fully identify and describe the Lot offered at Auction, including photographs and illustrations. Prop Store in no way claims any connection to or relationship with the producers of the motion picture or other programme. In all cases, the use of the titles or other elements of a motion picture or other programme is for informational purposes only.

12. Events outside our control

Prop Store will not be liable or responsible for any failure to perform, or delay in performance of, any of its obligations under these Conditions that is caused by an event outside its control, that being any act or event beyond Prop Store's reasonable control, including without limitation strikes, lock-outs or other industrial action by third parties, civil commotion, riot, invasion, terrorist attack or threat of terrorist attack, war (whether declared or not) or threat or preparation for war, fire, explosion, storm, flood, earthquake, subsidence, epidemic or other natural disaster, or failure of public or private telecommunications networks. Prop Store's obligations shall be suspended and time for performance extended until such time as the event outside its control is over, following which a new collection or shipping date can be agreed.

13. Other important terms

13.1. If any part of these Conditions is found by any court to be invalid, illegal or unenforceable, that part shall be discounted and the rest of the Conditions shall continue to be valid to the fullest extent permitted by law.

13.2. The contract is between the Seller, Buyer and Prop Store and no other person shall have any rights to enforce any of its terms.

13.3. If Prop Store fails to insist on performance of any of a Buyer's obligations under these Conditions, or if it delays in doing so, that will not mean that Prop Store has waived its rights against the Buyer and does not mean the Buyer no longer has to comply with those obligations.

13.4. These Conditions are governed by English law, without regard to its choice of law provisions. The Parties agree that any dispute or claim (including non-contractual disputes or claims) arising out of or in connection with this agreement or its subject matter or formation may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction located in England or Wales or, alternatively, in any court of competent jurisdiction where Prop Store or the Bidder/Buyer resides, at the option of the Party bringing the claim, only. The Parties expressly agree to the jurisdiction of such courts and agree to submit to the jurisdiction of such courts. The prevailing party shall be entitled to an award of all attorneys' fees, costs and expenses incurred by it/him/her in connection with the dispute. "Attorneys' fees and expenses" includes, without limitation, paralegals' fees and expenses, attorneys' consultants' fees and expenses, expert witness' fees and expenses, and all other expenses incurred by the prevailing party or its attorneys in the course of their representation of the prevailing party in anticipation of and/or during the course of the litigation, whether or not otherwise recoverable as "attorneys' fees" or as "costs" under applicable law; and the same may be sought and awarded in accordance with applicable procedure as pertaining to an award of contractual attorneys' fees.

13.5 By registering for this auction, the supplied card will automatically have a sum of £0.01 held and subsequently returned within 30 working days to verify the validity of the card.

13.6 The buyer is solely responsible for ascertaining that each lot sold with copyright is otherwise cleared for publication including but not limited to satisfying any publicity right that persons appearing in an image may have under any statute or common law. Neither the consignor nor Prop Store Ltd makes any representation or warranty as to any matters that need to be cleared prior to publication. No representation or warranty is made regarding copyright outside of the United Kingdom. All publication issues should be referred to the buyer's own professional advisors. All representations or warranties as to copyright or rights to publish are solely made by the consignor and not Prop Store Ltd; the buyer agrees that Prop Store Ltd. will not be liable to Buyer in any respect for alleged breach of any such representation or warranty.
